PRESENTATION

Energy from Waste: The big city perspective.

ANNOTATION

Parts of Europe are still far behind in achieving the same levels as waste performance as seen in most western and northern European Member States. Landfill is still a dominant waste disposal method for certain countries and development of EFW there is slow. Recycling markets are seeing unprecedented changes due to the Chinese recycling import restrictions especially for many low-quality materials. EFW has a role to play, now and in the future, to safeguard public hygiene and taking care of the many combustible materials and waste for which no or limited recycling options exist.

LECTURER'S PROFILE

Jarno Stet was educated in Amsterdam and London and he holds a double degree in facilities management in both these countries. He has worked for Westminster City Council since 2003, currently as Waste & Recycling Manager looking after the City Council's Waste and Recycling Collection, Street Cleansing and Ancillary Services and Waste Treatment Contracts that provide environmental services to a resident population of 250,000, 34,000 businesses as well as 1 million daily visitors, commuters and tourists.

Jarno is current Secretary of the National Association of Waste Disposal Officers (NAWDO). NAWDO is the primary network for senior local authority (LA) waste managers with statutory responsibilities for waste disposal. It represents the interests of the client side of waste management for LA waste disposal authorities.

ORGANIZATION'S PROFILE

Westminster City Council is the local authority serving the heart of London. The City of Westminster stretches from Pimlico and Victoria in the south through the West End, Marylebone and Bayswater to Paddington and Queen's Park in the north-west. It includes the capital's principal areas of government, shopping, entertainment and tourism and the headquarters of innumerable commercial and professional organisations together with extensive residential areas of all types.

The resident population now stands at approximately 234,000 but it is estimated that about 1 million people set foot in Westminster at some time during the day. There are also tens of thousands of people who live in the City for short-periods or on a part-time basis who are not included in the resident population.

The City Council employs about 4,800 staff who work flexibly over a large number of locations, almost all of them within the city boundaries.
